LB 543

SENATOR CHAMBERS: Mr. President, members of the Legislature, perhaps I've been too good and effective a mentor while in this Legislature. But Senator Redfield wasn't paying attention to my comment about having to learn so much after I got out of school. Pointed out that history was my major at Creighton, and I got a degree that listed a major in history. My mastery of history, such as it is, came from extensive reading after I got out of school. I buy history books. I can't walk through a book store without buying...I have to leave money out of my pockets. I cannot pick up these book of the month and other club offerings without buying history books. And after I get the first few, then I don't buy any more. And they are cheaper when you buy the first few cheaply. But the point that can be made is that having gone to a private institution, I'm in a position to make judgments about them. And they are not necessarily the best place for a person to go to get an education that will fit him or her to live in the world. I grew up in what is called the ghetto. I spent time at Creighton, then I went back home to the real world. Right now I have one foot in this Legislature and one foot in my community. You will not find people who attend public or private schools who comport themselves in the way that I do. But the point I want to make from all that I'm saying is this. I read the constitution and, based on my reading, I believe what we're doing is unconstitutional. Is Senator Bromm still on the floor? Senator Bromm?

PRESIDENT MAURSTAD: Senator Bromm.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: Here he comes. As he approaches, I'd like to ask him a question. Senator Bromm, if...and I shall. But as we both know, something could happen and I may not live long enough to do that. I may croak in the meantime. But if I don't croak, and manage to challenge this program that is exclusively for private and parochial schools, what do you think the outcome of that lawsuit would be, if you have an opinion? Let me ask it a different way. Do you think I have a chance to prevail?

SENATOR BROMM: I think you have a chance.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: Okay. You're very forthright. Thank you.
